GUERRILLAS OF SZAR TAKEN

By FREDERICK WERNER.
 Special Correspondent of the International News Service.
 BERLIN, Aug. 20.—(By wire)—Novo-Georgievsk, mightiest fortress of the Caucasus, has fallen. The capture by German troops of the great stronghold at the junction of the Vistula and Narew rivers was officially announced here today.

Twenty thousand Russian soldiers were captured at Novo-Georgievsk. The Germans also took enormous quantities of war material, including 750 cannons.

With the capture of Novo-Georgievsk the Germans have taken the last of the Vistula fortresses and removed a danger that existed as long as that stronghold was held by the Russians. The pursuit of the retreating Russian armies can now be continued without any possibility of a sudden sortie.

Novo-Georgievsk was captured under the eyes of Emperor William himself, he having arrived there while the German troops were making their attack.

The fortress fell after a siege of twelve days during which the high German guns poured upon it a rain of shells. The outlying forts were taken one by one, while the German circle drew closer daily to the main fortifications.

The German General Staff accompanied Emperor William to Novo-Georgievsk to watch the closing act of the military drama enacted there. While the capture of Kovno was of more importance from a strategic point, the number of prisoners taken at Novo-Georgievsk was at least three times as large as that at Kovno.

RUPTURE LEADS TO WASHINGTON VIEW

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The United States government is not yet convinced that the sinking of the White Star liner Arabic by a German submarine yesterday was "a deliberate unfriendly" act as outlined by President Wilson in his last note to Germany.

Until complete information from American official sources is in his hands, Secretary of State Lansing today said that he would not try to decide whether our rights have been violated.

He said he would not attempt to form any opinion, nor would the President, on the meagre details so far available. Only two dispatches have been received by his department. They do not clear up any of the doubtful grounds.

By direct order of the executive, all officials were prohibited from talking for publication.

All that could be gotten out of anybody was "We must await further particulars."

5 PASSENGERS IN DEATH LIST

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Another White Star liner was reported sunk today by a German submarine. This latest victim of submarine warfare is the Bovie, with a tonnage of 6,583.

Five other steamers were sunk by German submarines today. They were the steamers New York City, 2,970 tons, British; Baron Erskine, 5,585 tons, British; the Restormel, 2,118 tons, British; the Rena Castillo, 1,718 tons, Spanish, and the Aversesbog, 1,150 tons, Norwegian.

The crews of the Erskine, Restormel, Castillo and Aversesbog were reported saved. Fifty-three members of the crew of the New York City, a Bristol steamer, were landed.

Two Americans Missing, According to New Lists

By International News Service.
 LONDON, Aug. 20.—Five passengers, two of them Americans and 25 members of the White Star Liner Arabic's crew were lost when the vessel was sunk by a German submarine yesterday, according to an official statement issued this afternoon at the White Star office. Among the five missing passengers are two Americans.

The figures contained in the official statement follows: Total persons on board Arabic 425; passengers saved 176; members of crew saved 218; missing passengers 6; missing members of crew 25.

"WOMEN AND CHILDREN FIRST" OF THE SEA, HELD GOOD ON STRICKEN ARABIC

NO PANIC ON SHIP WHILE BOATS WERE BEING LOWERED TO WATER

QUEENSTOWN, Aug. 20.—There was a marked absence of panic on the Arabic when she was torpedoed by a German submarine. "There was naturally excitement and some confusion but no manifestation of frenzy or wild terror," declared C. H. Pringle, of Toronto, Ont., one of the survivors. "Women and children were placed in the life boats first and quickly lowered over the side. As the ship settled very quickly, a

LAST U.S. WARNING TO GERMANY

The last note sent by the United States to Germany growing out of the Lusitania tragedy contained this warning:

Repetition by the commanders of German naval vessels of acts in contravention of those rights must be regarded by the government of the United States when they affect American citizens as deliberately unfriendly.

In its note of June 9 to Germany the United States said:

Nothing but actual forcible resistance or continued efforts to escape by flight when ordered to stop for the purpose of visit on the part of the merchantman has ever been held to forfeit the lives of her passengers and crew.

number of persons, including some women, jumped into the water, but they were dragged into the boats of upon the life-rafts.

"Most of the passengers were on the deck when the attack was made. The air was clear and the sea calm. I was looking through marine glasses at the time and saw the wake of the torpedo as it sped toward the ship, but I did not see the submarine.

"The torpedo came at enormous speed, striking the Arabic on the starboard side. The impact made the big liner shudder from stem to stern. At the explosion occurred passengers had been rushing for life-rafts, and Captain William Finch from the bridge began shouting orders to officers.

"The vessel began to sink even before the expiry of water, cast up by the explosion, had settled."

Major G. L. Money, retired, of the Canadian militia, who, with his brother and two daughters, was a passenger, said he had just finished breakfast when the alarm was sounded.

"I did not feel the trembling of the ship," said Major Money, "but when the alarm sounded I ran on deck. There I found all hands getting into lifeboats which were being lowered in a very orderly way."

"After placing my two daughters in a boat, I was told to get into the boat myself, and, accompanied by my brother, I did so."

"The boat was so crowded that I lowered myself into the water. When the Arabic plunged to the bottom, I was carried down by the current, but fought my way to the surface where I came up, amongst a mass of wreckage. I saw a lifeboat about fifty feet away and swam toward it. The people in the boat did not see me and passed away. Then I caught hold of a plank and clung to it until I saw signals another boat with lights on board. I did not know until then that my brother had been saved."

"The question whether my daughters and brother had been saved, the rescued passengers were Stella Carol, known as 'Stella,' the Lark," a singer on her way to fill an American contract.

A member of the crew of the Arabic said when the steamer was struck she was going at sixteen knots making for the Exmouth. When the torpedo struck, a part of the ship was torn away and he saw the bodies of two lifeboats and of five engineers whose watch was blown to pieces and into the sea.

John Walker of Alaska, who when he arrived here had only a half-hour, said the crew of the Arabic in the short ten minutes which they had to get passengers into the boats, and but for the discipline maintained and the excellent work of the rescuers, the loss of life would have been hundreds of persons, according to Mr. Walker.

The submarine, according to Mr. Walker, was seen before it launched the torpedo, but there was not time to make out its name. Captain Charles Pringle of the Motor Company, Limited, of Toronto, said that most of the passengers on board the Arabic were Canadian.

SAILORS SAVE WOMAN. One woman who fell into the sea, and who was rescued by the crew of the Arabic, was a Canadian, named Mrs. M. J. Money, who was a passenger on the Arabic.

Because of such precautions Manager P. A. Franklin said comparatively few lost their lives aboard the Arabic.

"It is now customary," continued Mr. Franklin, "to have everything ready for trouble when entering or leaving British waters. The lifeboats are swung out and lifelines are right at hand. All possible arrangements are made to notify and save passengers without confusion or unpleasant delay. The Arabic was a big boat and she carried a small lot of passengers."

BRIDE-TO-BE OF HARTFORD MAN WAS ON ARABIC

HARTFORD, Aug. 20.—Among the first cabin passengers sailing on the Arabic was Miss Violet H. Alderson of Blackpool, Lancashire, Eng., who was coming to America to wed William Hiding, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hiding of East Hartford.

The bride and groom came from Blackpool two years ago and William Hiding and Miss Alderson, who were sweethearts, corresponded, with the result that they became engaged two months ago and decided to be married here in August. The letter sent by Miss Alderson was received Tuesday and the Hiding was planning to meet the steamer in New York next week. William Hiding said tonight he had hoped to persuade his fiancée to marry him at once in New York, thus returning to East Hartford.

ARABIC NEWS CAUSES WALL STREET BREAK

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—The stock market broke sharply on news that a German submarine had sunk another British liner, the Arabic.

United States Steel, weakest of the leaders, fell over two points, and other stocks of almost equal prominence showed losses of one or two, while a few of the recently advanced specialties added two to five points. The closing was heavy to weak, with only slight recovery from minimum quotations.

Even before word of Germany's latest marine exploit became generally known there was an absence of the keen in the so-called "war stocks," the main, railways showed underlying strength, holding within a point of thresholds, with the exception of Shipping and Canadian Pacific, which recorded wider fluctuations. The Bank of England increased its gold holdings for the week by almost $10,000,000, while the Bank of France added almost twice that amount of the previous week.

United States bonds were unchanged on call.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE DEAF

If you are losing your hearing—if you are troubled with buzzing and ringing in the ears—if you find that your nostrils are clogged—if you have and spit in the morning—if you have given up hopes of finding relief, just go to Hiker-Jaynes, or any other drug store, and purchase one of Fluid Ear-Raid. Mix this with one pint of warm water. Put two drops in the affected ear every night. Put one tablespoonful in a quart of glass of warm water and gargle three or four times a day morning and evening. Keep this up for a few weeks and test your hearing and you will be pleased to note the improvement. You will also, no doubt, discover that your catarrh has disappeared and head noises gone.

Final Clean-Up Sale

At prices so low they have to reach up to touch bottom

Now's the time to buy—not to hesitate. For here's the biggest good-clothes snap in all New England—a positive clearance of the balance of our summer stock without regard for cost or loss.

It seems almost a pity to put these bargain-counter prices on such goods—all new, high-grade and desirable—but our policy permits no other course.

Come today or tomorrow. Supply your future as well as present needs. You'll never have a better chance.

ARABIC'S COMMANDER CALLED SHIP SAFE FROM SUBMARINES

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—As the third latest maritime catastrophe on the Atlantic, the White Star liner Arabic has long been regarded by sailors as the most luxurious and the fastest steamer of her class. She had a gross tonnage of 10,000 and a speed of 20 knots, with a beam of 60 feet and a draught of 20 feet.

She has been employed in both Boston and New York constantly since 1914 for the White Star as well as in the Mediterranean cruising trade. She was equipped with double bottom, watertight compartments, the submarine-resisting system and wireless apparatus.

This floating palace came through many perils of the sea. Time and time again she was pursued by submarines. On March 25, while carrying a contingent of prisoners from the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Luitpold, she was chased by a German submarine in the Irish Sea. She went down and was not seen for several days.

Before her last trip, the ship's crew was when among prospects of fitting a submarine. A raft raised out with a parachute was lowered astern and the sailors took part shots at it with carbines. One member of the crew flew like an arrow into an attack from the aeroplane and the machine gunners of the crew tried to get the line of the aeroplane. If the Arabic was so badly threatened by violence.

Contributed says the Arabic on her last trip from this port July 25. Hired by the United States government, it consisted of 212 crew of supply provisions, valued at $27,514, 6,000 cases of cartridges, 100,000 cases of explosives, 100,000 cases of dynamite, 100,000 cases of gunpowder, 100,000 cases of matches, 100,000 cases of soap, 100,000 cases of food, 100,000 cases of clothing, 100,000 cases of bedding, 100,000 cases of furniture, 100,000 cases of other supplies.

RED SOX WOBBLY ON WESTERN TRIP

CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—Right now the White Sox are busily engaged in lambasting the Red Sox from Boston, and some to think of it they have done that little thing called Summer save when "Bill" Carrigan came visiting with his classy crew in mid-July. On that all five combats were staged and the Red Sox looked on to all but one of them.

Even with that one-sided record, Chicago has the edge on Boston for the Summer. Yesterday's scrap between the armies of Carrigan and Leonard was their eleventh of the campaign. It was also the White Sox's ninth victory.

The Red Sox have put up two very wobbly shows here this trip. Most of the way they have looked good enough on the defense, but their sticking, especially in the pinches, has been lamentably weak, while the club in exhibiting the old army game has taken absolutely no chances.

The punch is missing. The fire and snap are also absent. They have the strength in their beyond doubt, and continue the Red Sox will begin cutting up some high jinks again right soon, today, more than likely. And this is the day they must win. Otherwise, providing the Tigers stay the mischief machine the daily thrashing the U. S. Johnson procession will have a new leader by night-fall.

Carrigan's morning announcement was the "Smoky Joe" Wood was to go to the bullpen in today's matinee on the South Side, the U. S. Johnson players are looking for the Big Boston pitch to cross the plate in the first inning, and the elongated right-center has always been a particular puzzle.

Then, the Red Sox beat it down to St. Louis tonight, a spot where Wood is most always a winner, and it looks reasonable to believe "Smoky Joe" will be saved for the opener with Ricker's Hoopes.

Joe Horn or Jim Scott, the former, is all likelihood, as he has been just about Rowland's premier pitcher of late weeks. Will sell the heavy work for the White Sox.

HORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

I must admit that the National League pennant scramble has me guessing. I am still convinced the Braves will ultimately win the flag, but we will have to play hang-up baseball for the rest of the season if we are to finish in front.

I have maintained all year that the Phillies would not catch the Braves. I even went so far as to say that the Braves' team would not finish in second place. Recent events since we left Philadelphia, seem to bear out my statement. The Phillies are slumping rapidly and have lost their last three games.

I believe that Brooklyn, Chicago and Pittsburgh will be in the fight to the finish, but we should be able to beat out this trio. I had when the second game of our series with the Cardinals, we would be only three and a half games out of place. My reasoning was that the Cardinals, we were unfortunate, however, and beaten by Miller Huggins' outfit. We would have won if we had hit at opportune moments. But we lacked that punch which wins close games. Here's hoping we will do better today!

I was glad to hear that the Cardinals had finally let go of the Reds. It is a relief to the fans. The Cardinals were forced to remain idle as long as the Reds were in the game. The Cardinals were a member of the Cincinnati Reds at the opening of the 1914 campaign. He then jumped to the St. Louis Cardinals, and the Cincinnati Reds immediately got out an injunction preventing him from playing with the Cardinals.

The result has been that the Cardinals have been forced to remain idle. He still receives his salary, while the Reds paid him a fat bonus for signing with the Cardinals. But as Marandville is a natural ball player and likes the game, it must have hurt him greatly to be kept out of a pennant battle. Marandville can play with the Reds or the Cardinals, or the Cardinals, according to the situation in his club.

Injunctions, suspensions, writs, appeals and other legal terms do not mean a great deal to the average baseball fan. They are not interested in court proceedings and I don't blame them. I do not know much about court proceedings and I don't want to know. When I pick up a sporting page and read about the Federal League or an organized baseball club losing a court battle because they did not mean a great deal to the average baseball fan.

President Caffery is not worrying about the Reds. If the Reds and their associates wish to spend their own money losing baseball ventures that's all right. They have the right to do so. I am not going to allow them to worry me the least bit.

Hughes or Tyler against Leo Meadows seems to be the bill at Braves Field this afternoon, when the final game of the series between the Champions and Cards is staged.

It is the rubber game, the Braves having been baffled in the second encounter after annexing the first with flying colors.

The Cards have been meeting the bill hard on the present visit, and have Stalling's chances for today will be safe in putting considerably on the horseshoe. Yesterday the Cards outbatted the Braves, two to one, but of course, today is another day and the Champions' batting eyes may prove clearly.

Carlton Fries' willing workers are determined not to be faked two days in succession, and that is why plenty of action should be witnessed in today's proceedings.

For University hits like Tony Connolly—of course, the new field has yet to see a home run—would be appreciated. Likewise a choice assortment of singles and other run producers. The Meadows had better have a care. The Braves are not in a mood to be trifled with today.

White Way Does Not Attract Actress Just Because She Plays "Passion."

Beautiful Florence Short, who impersonates "Passion" in "Experience."

MISS FLORENCE SHORT, who plays the role of "Passion" in "Experience," the morality play coming to the Elbert Theatre August 28, feels a very much happier woman. Miss Short appears at the end of the career scene in "Experience," easily the most spectacular part of the play. "You're a girl," she says, "and you're a girl."

"Passion," said Miss Short recently. "I played the part all last season in New York, and because it was a fine showy role I was very happy at first. But soon the enormous number of 'mush' notes I received began to bother me. Men whom I had never heard of sent me diamonds and other presents, with invitations to meet them for supper. They thought that because I played 'Passion' on the stage, that I might want to play the part in real life. As a matter of fact I am very unlike the role. I am straight home after the performance every night, and usually have a glass of milk and a chicken sandwich. During the long run in New York my mother and I had an apartment opposite Central Park, and every morning at 6 o'clock I would go over into the park and feed the sheep."

Helen Discovers Unexpected Revelations as the Great West Discloses Itself

THEY had been flying all day through the flat and monotonous country of Arizona. Contrasted with the picturesque of New Mexico, with its red soil and marvelous sand formations, it had a quality which had not been in Helen's nerves. There had been one spot which quite impressed their little party and that was the densely pine grove section surrounding Williams, which came as a relief, but they had passed through that all too soon and were once more on the desert.

Yesterday had been really exciting. At Albuquerque the train had stopped for half an hour and they had all climbed down and in a minute were surrounded by Indians. Helen was enthusiastic about the picture and was easily induced to buy some things from the quipus. She saw Indian quipus with fat round, expressionless faces, strapped to their mothers' backs, and she bought an Indian doll for Winifred and some beaded Indian moccasins for Mary.

Sora had promised to visit Mary while Helen was away, for Warren had decided to keep the apartment and running. After Mary, capable and ready checked, had impressed him with her honesty and efforts to do the right thing.

The Mob That Murdered Frank Will Not Escape

GOVERNOR SLATON of Georgia was not afraid to deal justly with Leo M. Frank. Governor Harris, his successor, will not be afraid to deal justly with the ruffian mob that tore Frank from his cell and brutally murdered him.

Governor Harris has said: "It can be taken for granted that I will use my every power to see to it that the members of this mob receive fitting punishment for their crime. I will see to it that the authorities of the county in which the crime occurred are given every help at the disposal of the State."

These words will be heartily approved by every representative citizen of Georgia. That Commonwealth no more condones lynchings than New York or Pennsylvania or Massachusetts condones assassinations which may occur within their borders.

The outcry against Frank was raised by hate-crazed irresponsible in whose ranks were enough criminals to carry out the hideous plot that resulted in Frank's assassination.

For this outrage there can be no toleration, north or south, east or west. To allow the murderers to go unpunished would be to abandon justice and set anarchy up in its stead.

If the offering of a reward for the apprehension of the butchers will facilitate their capture it should be offered.

Never have government and law and order been more flagrantly set at naught. Never has justice been more ruthlessly trampled upon.

Backed by the opinion of the best lawyers of the land, and sustained by the enlightened people of the State, Governor Slaton refused to permit Frank to be executed while there still existed grave doubts of his guilt.

The man was not freed. His sentence was commuted to life imprisonment. There was a brief demonstration against Slaton, which was frowned on by all intelligent Georgians.

Not daring to molest a courageous man, the cowards who composed the mob retired. But among them were a few, who, encouraged by a spirit of sullen hatred and anarchy, plotted to overthrow justice at a blow, and glut their hatred by an act unparalleled, even in the bloody history of lynch law.

Mobs are always cowards. The murderers hoped to strike swiftly and escape. They did strike swiftly. Waiting till the act of Governor Slaton in commuting Frank's sentence had been generally accepted as the wisest course, they organized a force sufficient to overpower the ordinary penitentiary guard, dragged their victim forth and put him to death.

The attack was not expected. The guards were easily overpowered. Night aided the assassins in the purpose, and in skulking to cover once it had been carried out.

Until every man who took part in this crime is found and punished the people of Georgia will have a duty to perform.

Governments are not set up to be overruled by assassins. Governments are not elected and put in office to have their decisions flouted by murderous mobs.

There can be no condoning any lynching. A lynching of this daring and atrocious character is an insult not only to the people of Georgia, but to the people of the whole United States.

There must be no refuge for these butchers. To give them aid or comfort, to offer them opportunity for concealment, is a criminal act and should be punished as such.

For the authorities to rest while they are still at liberty would be inexcusable dereliction of duty.

Governor Slaton vindicated the honor of the State of Georgia when he commuted Frank's sentence, defying when he did so the threats of the men who are now cowering from justice. Governor Harris has again vindicated it in his courageous determination to hunt down the murderers.

No means must be spared to bring this about. While they have their liberty the honor not only of a State but of the entire nation is at stake.

Once-Overs

If you want friends, you must prove that you can be a friend. The friendship game is certainly overworked today. There are many people who are anxious to have it appear that they are friendly with Mr. Tom and Mr. Harry, but if they had to do anything which would inconvenience them to keep that friendship it could go "bunk."

Now a real friend is, above all things, loyal. And it sometimes costs a good bit of courage to stand by a friend who is in trouble. But if you cannot be loyal to your friend under all circumstances, do not expect that he will be any stronger than you are.

Often we expect much more than we are willing to give. "My friend." What comfort those words imply. What mutual understanding those two words mean. Keep your friends. You cannot have too many.

It is worth a lifetime to find one true friend. Then, having selected your friend, stand by him to the last. For, as Emerson says, to lose a friend is as bad as to prove yourself untrue—since you selected him.

Noblesse Oblige Among Working Women

Every Conscientious Girl Forced to Do
More Than Her Real Share of Labor if Sex Is Not to Be Misjudged—Financial Emancipation, However, Well on Way

By Dorothy Dix

"WHY do you work so hard?" asked a man of a very successful business woman. "You are invaluable to your firm and you could dictate to them about the things that you would do and you wouldn't do."

"I don't work just for myself," replied the business woman. "I am working for all the women in the world, and especially all the young girls who want a chance to make an honest living. I feel that I am a pioneer in the commercial world, blazing a trail through the forests of difficulties and prejudices and conventions that have blocked the way of the women who had to earn their own bread and butter."

"I am just as much a pathfinder for the women to come as the Pilgrim Fathers or John Smith or Daniel Boone were when they started out to conquer the wilderness for the generations behind them, and things are going to be easier or harder for these women according to whether I make good or fail."

"Men are judged by other men individually, but men judge a whole sex by a single woman. If a man hires a man stenographer or bookkeeper or salesman who is incompetent and lacks judgment and promptness he promptly fires the unsatisfactory individual and gets somebody else. He doesn't say, 'I'll never have another man stenographer or bookkeeper or clerk around the place. They are no good. They can't spell for beans, and have no intelligence, and have about as much sense as a hen.' Oh, no, he knows that some men are capable and trustworthy, and others are not, and he keeps changing until he gets the kind of a man that he wants."

"But woe to the girl stenographer or bookkeeper or clerk who makes mistakes, or is tardy. When her employer dismisses her he washes his hands of the whole female sex, and declares that women are no good in business, and haven't enough sense to understand a business proposition, and are unreliable, and he will have no more of them. So the girl who fails not only loses her own job, but she keeps other women out of good jobs."

"That's the reason I do more work than I have to, and fail to take advantage of privileges that are really my due. I am trying to keep the door of opportunity for women propped open by standing with my back squarely against it. Sometimes I am on my very tired, and I would like to take a rest. Then I remember that one of the eternal objections that are always put forward against women in business is that they lack physical strength and endurance, and I realize that I must disprove this by going on with my work, even though the men all around me are indulging themselves in nervous prostration. They can afford to be sick. A woman can't, for the sake of other women."

"I am called on to do many things personally distasteful to me in my work. The men who work with me 'kick' when they have to do things that are obnoxious to their tastes. I don't, because women are supposed to be finicky and whimsical and 'choosy' about their work, and I must break down this superstition by showing, as far as I can, that the woman in business can put aside her own preferences and be as impersonal a worker as any machine."

"The men with whom I work have nerves and tempers that get the better of them at times, but I keep my temper and nerves under an iron control, for if I should suddenly blow out in an emotional outburst every man about would call it hysterical, and say, 'What else can you expect of a woman?'"

"I believe that the greatest thing that has happened for humanity in thousands of years is the financial emancipation of woman which is beginning to take place now. It means a new heaven and a new earth for women. It means independence instead of dependence for them. It means hope instead of despair. It means a new interest and joy in life. It means even a right to their own bodies and souls, for, for the first time in the history of the world, no woman needs marry for support."

"So you see," added the business woman, with a smile, "we women who are leading the feminine commercial invasion are not working for ourselves alone. We are working for all the other women who would never be able to get a foothold in the business world if we hadn't made good."

Pilgrimage

By Jane McLean

DAWN'S lantern lit and a soul new born.
Hushed and sweet with the breath of morn.
Strong and young to begin the day
Over a white rose petalled way.

A soul's hard fight on a crooked road,
The grind and push of a crushing load;
High noon, the heat of a hostile bread—
A milestone passed on the road to dead.

The chill of twilight above, below;
The passing of footsteps, measured, slow;
The midnight toll of a cold church bell;
A soul drift with the solemn knell.

WHERE ARE THE WAISTS OF YESTERYEAR?

I CAN recall those days with ease
When, wasp-like, women seemed to try
To cut themselves in two to please

The masculine observing eye;
I used sometimes to wonder why
They did not have the constant fear

Of snapping off twist neck and thigh;
Where are the waists of yesteryear?

They've laced their corsets by degrees,
Each day or two a tighter tie;
The husband had to brace his knees
The proper pressure to supply;

Movement in Germany to give surnames strictly German names. Even without the movement, surnames must already be echoing with small boy calling his doghound, "Here Munchenburger," or small girl greeting her Newfoundland with "Good boy, Tipstip!"

Hops the White House stenographer doesn't get a note to Hatt in the envelope addressed to Great Britain, or a note to Carranza in the envelope mailed to Berlin.

Texas farmer has produced a new vegetable by grafting tomato on an egg plant. If he can now graft the result on a hog, he'll have a great combination breakfast vegetable.

T. R. says he will stick to the Moon. Well, two's company.

At the end of a year's war all the belligerents attribute their successes to God. This is grossly unfair to the Devil.

Shawnee, Okla.—A committee of the best citizens of this place met early today and lynched Ed Berry.

Wonder what the worst citizens were doing?

Washington has a haunted house in which the ghost walks five times a week. Wish this office were haunted the same way.

Germany has apologized for sinking another Norwegian ship. Why not save time by pinning the apology to the torpedoes?

"Why do you recognize a fellow like that?"
"Oh, well, we get snags, and that's something."
